I am very pleased to be able to gather with everyone for the 28th Small Powertrains and Energy Systems Technology Conference (SETC2024).

The SETC is an international conference that has consistently served as the international technology conference for small engines, powertrains, and related products. In 1989, the first SETC took place in Milwaukee, USA., and since then it has been hosted internationally and we have now reached the 28th conference held in Bangkok which the last time host in 2005. I would like to express my deepest respect for the efforts of the Society of Automotive Engineering
